Feature Vehicle

Club member Ken Piper passed away early this year and he left his 1925 Dodge tourer to his sons Tristan and Daniel. The car had not been started since late last year and recently Tristan got hold of Murray Murfett for assistance to get it going again. Late last month Murray and Ian Rees went around to help the sons start the car. So we checked the oil, water and fuel, figured out what the various switches were for and fuel isolation valve at the bottom of the vacuum tank and bought a new battery. Started the car and it burst into life!. Ken had done an excellent restoration and on the wall of the garage was a pictorial history of its restoration from when he received it in a totally unrestored state to its completion (photo below). Finally with the car going and with Daniel driving they both took the car for a spin around the block. Well done Tristan and Daniel and Tristan has a tattoo to show he is proud of his father's car.

President's Report September 2019

As this will be my last and final report before the AGM on 27th September I would personally like to thank all and everybody involved with the Club. Those include the Secretary, Treasurer, Committee members, Building Subcommittee and members for a great year. And what a great year it was!

The new Clubrooms were finally finished and approved by Council. Ten big ticks to all involved in this massive project. Well done all.

As I will not be renominating this year, I wish the future President all the best for the No 1 position.

Don't forget the opening of the Clubrooms on 27th October at 2pm. Arrive early to get a parking place and have a talk to fellow members. BYO. Afternoon tea supplied by Club.

All positions have to be filled at the AGM on the 27th of this month. Members are encouraged to have a go. So have a think about it and also give some older office bearers a spell.

Club run on Sunday 29th to Port Fairy should be another good day with the firing of the canon at 2pm. Don't forget CheeseWorld on October 19th at 2.30 pm for the visit from the Victorian Corvette Club. Be there and see some of the greatest muscle cars in the world (go Corvettes!).

2020 calendars are now on sale for $15. Be quick as they are selling fast. See Ken Perrett, Ian Rees or Natalie Serra. A quick recovery to those not feeling well. Safe and happy motoring to all in the future.

Regards and many thanks.

How to Jump-Start People!

At the last General Meeting we were fortunate to have two Nurse Educators from South West Health Care demonstrate the use of our new Defibrillator, in case of sudden heart failure. We received a grant from the Moyne Shire for the purchase of safety equipment, which also included fire extinguishers, fire blanket and a first aid kit. And as was pointed out on the night, it is not much point having a defibrillator if nobody knows how to use it. Actually it was surprisingly easy, just turn it on and follow the recorded prompts, while doing chest compressions. After the initial instruction, the nurses had several members practising on two mannequins and there should now be sufficient confidence to swing into action should the need arise. The nurses did mention however that the defibrillator would be no good for jump-starting cars!

Photo below is of Murray and Ian after having installed the defibrillator on the wall adjacent to the door to the kitchen. Take time to familiarise yourself with its location. Don't be put off by the red light on top of the cabinet as its not set to go off and you can open the door and inspect the unit.

There is also a first aid kit hung over the cabinet. It has a comprehensive inventory of bandages etc.

Working Bees

Doug Byron organised two working bees at end of August and early September to work on completion items at the new Club Rooms. Plaques, photos and awards and signs were put up in the meeting room, door seals and notice board on front door and painting inside and out the front (see photo below). Also the defibrillator was put up on the wall by the kitchen (see above)

A 1928 Model AB Chevrolet in the Canadian Arctic – Teslin's First Car

My brother, who lives near Seattle in the US, has recently been on a road trip towing a caravan from where they live up through Canada into Alaska and to Prudhoe Bay on the Arctic Ocean and back – a round trip of about 8000 miles. About half way they went through a small town called Teslin in Yukon, Canada which is situated at about half way on the Alaska Highway on the shores of Teslin Lake. There they visited a museum where there is an interesting display of early 1900s life before the Alaska Highway was built in 1941 and in particular about a local inhabitant, George Johnston, who owned a 1928 Chevrolet. My brother provided the photos and information below.

Teslin is home to the Teslin Inland Tlingit First Nation. It has one of the largest Native populations in Yukon and much of the community's livelihood revolves around traditional hunting, trapping and fishing. The average day time low in Teslin in mid-winter is less than minus 20C and the record low is minus 50C.

The George Johnston Museum in Teslin is named after the venerated Tlingit elder, trapper, fur trader, entrepreneur and photographer. As the Tlingit met rapid changes during the early 20th century, their story is told by his collection of photographs, restored 1928 Chevrolet hunting car and colourful exhibits of ceremonial regalia.

The story of George's car – the first car owned by a First Nation member – is one of the Yukon's most colourful stories. George dreamed of owning a car and after a successful season in 1928, he bought a four cylinder Model AB Chevrolet sedan at the Taylor & Drury store in Whitehorse 110 miles away. He got a driving lesson in Whitehorse and then shipped the vehicle home aboard the steamboat "Thistle". The car travelled several hundred miles on the Yukon and Teslin Rivers to reach the isolated community of Teslin. There he had readied four miles of crude road that 13 years later was to become part of the fabled Alaska Highway north.

At his trapline in winter, George observed the lake from his watchtower to look for wolves, caribou and other game on the lake. In the age before antifreeze he drained the radiator into a pot to keep it warm over a stove. As soon as an animal was sighted, the water was funnelled back. One crank and he was off. But George discovered that the dark car out on the frozen lake alerted the animals so every winter he camouflaged it with white house paint. See photo adjacent of the car on the frozen lake in winter colours.

George also used his car as a taxi and in winter driving on the nearby frozen Teslin Lake. As well as serving as local taxi and hunting and trapping he also used the vehicle for his renowned photography as he is one of the Yukon's renowned early photographers. With a brownie box camera, self-taught skills and a rough dark room in the corner of a bush cabin, he produced hundreds of works depicting the life of his Tlingit people. His photos show them at church, school, holiday picnics, beading and dancing, working hides and catching fish, traveling by dog sled and snowshoes, work and play. Most of all it records their fruitful lives as hunters and trappers in the early 20th century. It is a masterful sociological and historical record, created in an unlikely place and over 20 years and made possible by his travels in his Chevrolet. Photo below of George on the running board of his Chevrolet with family members.

In 1962, 34 years after the original purchase, George Johnston returned the Chevrolet to Taylor & Drury Motors Ltd, without a dent in trade for a pickup truck. The company restored the car. They had some difficulty determining its original colour beneath many coats of winter and summer paint. Chuck Halliday, company president, donated it to the Yukon Government in 1992. The car is now on loan to the museum (see below).

So if you own a 1928 Chevrolet, it is in good company with this venerable car in Yukon with a fascinating history.
